Fastenings technique: Past, Present and Future

Almost a third of engineers who regularly design steel to concrete connections struggle because there is no software to design the different elements of a steel to concrete connection as a whole. Engineers also complain that optimisation of the whole connection is difficult and time consuming with little time for iterations. Many have found the baseplate rigidity difficult to check.

In this seminar Rolf Eligehausen explores this reality and the pit falls of concrete anchoring.

Seminar Dates

Brisbane: 11th March, Monday – at TAFE Auditorium, Ground Level, Block C 66 Ernest Street, South Brisbane QLD 4101
